Presented by
Programs in Whole Person Care
Faculty of Medicine, McGill University
Montreal, Quebec, Canada

What would it be like to participate in a conference that nurtured you, stimulated you, educated you, and sent you home with a new sense of what the practice of healthcare could be, and how you can begin to bring these insights into your own work as a physician, nurse or other healthcare professional?

Take the time to reconnect with what healthcare is for you and what it could be...

“We have the opportunity to participate in the birth of a new paradigm, one that entails a radical reframing of both diagnosis and therapeutics; how we see those we are caring for; how we see others; how we see ourselves.”

Balfour M. Mount, 2011

Call for Abstracts

Submissions are welcome from all disciplines within the health care professions on the topic of whole person care which is healthcare that relates to the recipient of care as a whole person (as opposed to a relationship limited to a disease, an organ system or even a whole body). The intention of whole person care is to synergize the power of modern biomedicine with the potential for healing of every person who seeks the help of a healthcare practitioner.

Abstracts may be submitted for Workshops, Proffered Papers, or Posters. Accepted abstracts will be published in a special edition of The International Journal of Whole Person Care. Full details and the online abstract submission form are available at: <http://www.cvent.com/d/1vqnjs>.
